

ABSTRACT

A method to approximate section properties of mechanical elements in which data is drawn directly from digital images representing the cross-section in question. Both homogeneous and composite structures may be evaluated.